REMARKS

Thank you. I just want to take a moment to say a few words about the historic events that took place this afternoon in our nation's capitol. The Inauguration of Barack Obama as our 44th president marks a turning of the page of history that anybody who watched will remember for many years to come. For the 44th time in 220 years, we had the privilege of witnessing a peaceful transition of executive power and leadership. To borrow two symbolic words spoken by our newly sworn in president, today is a symbol of the monumental accomplishments of our "patchwork heritage." We want to welcome our new president and wish him good luck in solving the many problems that confront our great nation. God bless America and may God bless this new day that is dawning across our land.
